CONSTITUTIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY

Advisory Editor JAMES M. BUCHANAN Nobel Laureate

Editors VIKTOR J. VANBERG RICHARD E. WAGNER

"Yet, although the problem of an appropriate social order is today studied from the different angles of economics, jurisprudence, political science, sociology, and ethics, the problem is one which can be approached successfully only as a whole."

Friedrich A. von Hayek

The journal CONSTITUTIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY is a forum for papers in the broad area of constitutional analysis, which lies at the intersection of several approaches in modern economics. All of these approaches share an interest in systematically integrating the institutional dimension—the study of political, legal, and moral institutions—into economic analysis.

Though its primary locus is in economics, CONSTITUTIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY has an explicit interdisciplinary orientation. One of its aims is to invite and encourage interdisciplinary exchange, including contributions from the various social sciences, philosophy, law, etc. Accordingly, CONSTITUTIONAL POLITICAL ECONOMY places particular emphasis on articles which, in style and substance, are suitable to this end. Theoretical papers and empirical studies are published, as well as contributions to constitutional policy issues. Reviews of pertinent books are also included.

Call for Papers

The Georgetown Public Policy Review (GPPR) publishes superior articles which promote useful discourse among members of the policymaking community. Articles pertaining to current public policy issues are welcome, with preference given to those articles which utilize the accepted tools of policy analysis.

Dates and Submission Guidelines

The GPPR is published semi-annually, in the Fall and the Spring. Articles are reviewed for publication on a rolling basis; however, they must be received by November 1, 1996 for publication in the Spring issue and May 1, 1997 for publication in the Fall issue. Authors should submit four copies of the entire work, a one paragraph abstract, and a brief biographical statement of each author. Articles should be no longer than 8,000 words and formatted in accordance with the Chicago Manual of Style. Please send submissions or direct inquiries to Submissions, Attn: Academic Outreach Editor, at the above address.

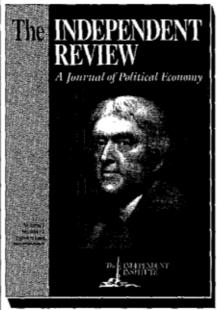

Subscription Information

A one year subscription to the GPPR is only US$15 (US$27 international) for individuals and US$20 (US$32 international) for institutions. Your subscription provides two issues featuring articles and interviews with some of the most progressive thinkers in a broad range of policy fields. To subscribe, please provide the information requested below and mail your check to: ranscending the all-too-common politicization and superficiality of public policy research and debate, The INDEPENDENT REVIEW is the new, interdisciplinary, quarterly, journal devoted to political economy and the critical analysis of government policy. Unlike too many journals, The INDEPENDENT REVIEW is superbly written, informative, provocative, wideranging, and based on solid scholarship.

THE FAR-REACHING NEW JOURNAL

Ranging across economics, political science, law, history, philosophy, sociology, and related fields, The INDEPENDENT REVIEW boldly challenges the politicization and bureaucratization of modern social institutions. Featuring in-depth, peerreviewed examinations of current policy questions by many of the world's outstanding scholars and policy experts, each issue is written in clear, vigorous English. Undaunted and uncompromising, this is the journal that will pioneer future debate!

Cato Institute

Founded in 1977, the Cato Institute is a public policy research foundation dedicated to broadening the parameters of policy debate to allow consideration of more options that are consistent with the traditional American principles of limited government, individual liberty, and peace. To that end, the Institute strives to achieve greater involvement of the intelligent, concerned lay public in questions of policy and the proper role of government.

The Institute is named for Cato's Letters, libertarian pamphlets that were widely read in the American Colonies in the early 18th century and played a major role in laying the philosophical foundation for the American Revolution.

Despite the achievement of the nation's Founders, today virtually no aspect of life is free from government encroachment. A pervasive intolerance for individual rights is shown by government's arbitrary intrusions into private economic transactions and its disregard for civil liberties.

To counter that trend, the Cato Institute undertakes an extensive publications program that addresses the complete spectrum of policy issues. Books, monographs, and shorter studies are commissioned to examine the federal budget, Social Security, regulation, military spending, international trade, and myriad other issues. Major policy conferences are held throughout the year, from which papers are published thrice yearly in the Cato Journal. The Institute also publishes the quarterly magazine Regulation.

In order to maintain its independence, the Cato Institute accepts no government funding. Contributions are received from foundations, corporations, and individuals, and other revenue is generated from the sale of publications. The Institute is a nonprofit, tax-exempt, educational foundation under Section 501(c)3 of the Internal Revenue Code.

GOVERNMENT AND THE MARKET

The main limit to economic growth during the next half century comes from . . . bad governmental policies and from the neglect of investments in the human capital of individuals. Bad government policies have been a far more effective deterrent to economic growth than obstacles posed by the environment. Stupid government policies rather than environmental damage is by far the world's greatest risk. . . .

Markets grow up spontaneously, they are not organized by governments, they grow on their own. If individuals are given freedom, they will help to develop markets for products that one cannot imagine in advance.
