SUMMARY TABLE 7
Dispositions toward envy 3

Recall a situation in which someone else was better off than you were. For example, someone who got a better grade than you, made more money, got promoted above you, or won a prestigious award, etc. Imagine that person would suffer a minor misfortune such as stumbling clumsily in a busy street for everyone to see, or spilling wine on his or her shirt at a fancy party. How well do the following statements describe how you might feel?

53. b) Dispositions toward envy: I would be pleased by the little misfortune that happened to him/her

Recall a situation in which someone else was better off than you were. For example, someone who got a better grade than you, made more money, got promoted above you, or won a prestigious award, etc. Imagine that person would suffer a minor misfortune such as stumbling clumsily in a busy street for everyone to see, or spilling wine on his or her shirt at a fancy party. How well do the following statements describe how you might feel? I would be pleased by the little misfortune that happened to him/her.

Survey Methodology

The Cato Institute 2019 Welfare, Work, and Wealth Survey was conducted by the Cato Institute in collaboration with YouGov. YouGov collected responses March 5 to 8, 2019 from 1,700 Americans 18 years of age and older. These were then matched into a nationally representative sample to produce the final dataset. The survey included 257 respondents who report currently receiving means-tested government assistance, 250 who previously received such assistance, and 1,191 who say they have not received welfare benefits. Results have been weighted to be representative of the national adult sample. The margin of error for the survey is +/- 2.2 percentage points at the 95% level of confidence. This does not include other sources of non-sampling error, such as selection bias in panel participation or response to a particular survey.

YouGov conducted the surveys online with its proprietary Web-enabled survey software, using a method called Active Sampling. Restrictions are put in place to ensure that only the people selected and contacted by YouGov are allowed to participate.

The respondents in each survey were matched to a sampling frame on gender, age, race, education, party identification, ideology, and political interest. The frame was constructed by stratified sampling from the full 2010

American Community Survey (ACS) sample with selection within strata by weighted sampling with replacements (using the person weights on the public use file). Data on voter registration status and turnout were matched to this frame using the November 2010 Current Population Survey. Data on interest in politics and party identification were then matched to this frame from the 2007 Pew Religious Life Survey as well as other media polls.

Each set of matched cases were weighted to its sampling frame using propensity scores. The matched cases and the frame were combined and a logistic regression was estimated for inclusion in the frame. The propensity score function included age, gender, race/ethnicity, years of education, ideology, non-identification with a major party, political interest, and census region. The propensity scores were grouped into deciles of the estimated propensity score in the frame and post-stratified according to these deciles. For the final dataset sample weights were post-stratified to match the full stratification of a five category age, four category race, two category gender, and four category education.
