

About the Contributors

MATTHEW D. MITCHELL is a senior fellow in the Centre for Human Freedom at the Fraser Institute. Prior to joining the Institute, Mitchell was a long-serving senior fellow at the Mercatus Center at George Mason University, where he remains an affiliated senior scholar. He is also a senior research fellow at the Knee Center at West Virginia University.

Mitchell received his Ph.D. and M.A. in economics from George Mason University. His writing and research focus on economic freedom, public choice economics, and the economics of government favouritism.

HORST FELDMAN is a Reader in Economics in the Department of Economics at the University of Bath (United Kingdom), which he joined in 2006. He received his Ph.D. in economics from the University of Hamburg (Germany) in 1990. From 1991 to 2005, he worked in the Department of Economics at the University of Tübingen (Germany), where he was awarded the titles 'Privatdozent' in 1998 and 'apl. Professor' in 2006. Horst's publications include three books, more than ninety articles in refereed journals and numerous chapters in edited books. His articles have been published in, among others, Kyklos, Journal of Comparative Economics, Public Choice, Journal of Institutional Economics, Economics Letters, and Southern Economic Journal.

WALKER WRIGHT is the manager of Academic Programs at the American Enterprise Institute in Washington, DC, and an adjunct faculty member at Brigham Young University-Idaho. His work spans economics, politics, and religion, with academic work published in journals such as Economic Affairs, Faith & Economics, BYU Studies, and others. His popular writing has appeared in Law & Liberty, Econlib, and Deseret News. His forthcoming book, In Trade We Trust: How Commerce Makes Us More Social, will be published by Bloomsbury. He holds an M.A. in government from Johns Hopkins University and an M.B.A. and B.B.A. from the University of North Texas.